the same restrictions on fuel and speed as prevailed during the war. This makes it all the more necessary to exercise all possible care in operating motor vehicles. In the nine months period ended December 31, no less than 1,267 people were injured in car accidents in Alberta. This reveals a serious situation and calls for remedial steps without delay to bring safer driving principles into greater observance.

Preventable Illness

IN RECENT YEARS THERE HAS BEEN growing awareness on the part of the public of the importance of health, not only to the individual but to the welfare of the nation as a whole. Efforts have been made by the Dominion and provincial governments through their departments of public health to keep before the people the facts concerning the prevention of disease, nutrition and other matters pertaining to health, while social welfare agencies, insurance companies, the Red Cross Society and other organizations interested in the welfare of the community have also done a great deal towards raising health standards in this country. In spite of the efforts which have been made to educate the people along these lines, however, authorities state that there is still much preventable illness which causes inconvenience to the individual and loss to the country through the effect which many interruptions in work have upon the output of our farms and factories.

High Cost To All Citizens

In this connection it is estimated that poor health costs Canadian workers in the neighborhood of $135,000,000 a year. Loss in production alone is some $200,000,000. These are huge sums of money, enough to be a serious consideration to every citizen, and the fact that medical authorities are of the opinion that much of the illness which causes this loss is preventable, makes an even more serious matter. A considerable percentage of the time lost from work because of illness is due to accidents or to unhealthy working or living conditions. Naturally, the greatest number of accidents are in the larger centres of industry, but there are many too on the farms, when proper precautions are not taken in the handling of machines and other farm equipment.

West Leads In Many Matters

Safe working conditions, and high standards of hygiene and cleanliness both at work and in homes are essential to good health and a minimum of preventable illness. Canada is fortunate in having far-sighted leaders in the field of public health. A great deal has been done in each province by legislation in matters such as safe milk and water supply, the control of communicable diseases, mental hygiene and numerous other matters. The Western provinces have been particularly alert in this field and have led other parts of Canada in many things including the treatment of tuberculosis and cancer. There is much knowledge, and there are many services at the disposal of the public and it is the duty of every citizen to avail himself of these services and to co-operate in every way in reducing the great national waste which is caused by preventable illness in Canada each year.

The landlady showed her new lodgers into their room, and hovered about anxiously while they looked around.

"Now I do want to be a good landlady," she exclaimed, "so if there's anything you want that I haven't got, do let me know, and I'll show you how to do without it."

"The after-dinner speech maker lasted for fifteen minutes."

"After partaking of such a meal," he continued, "I feel if I had eaten any more I would be tired to go."

From the far end of the table came an order to a waiter: "Give him a sandwich."

"That pretty girl seems to be having a good time."

"Yes, yes—her fiancé, a young fellow in a tuxedo, is coming home to marry her next month."

Well, she certainly seems to have solved the problem of what to do till the doctor comes."

"What an armature?"

"A chap who boxes for nothing!"

"I can't understand why I didn't get that job," said Betty.

"Well, what did the manager ask you?" inquired her friend.

"He asked if my punctuation was good."

"And what did you say?"

"I said I'd never been late for work in my life."

PREDICTS CANADA TO BE EMPIRE HUB

LONDON—Fifty years hence Canada will be the strategic centre of the British Empire. C. R. Fay, formerly professor of the economics department at the University of Toronto, wrote a letter from Cambridge, England, printed as a Sunday Times editorial.

Canada, he said, by reason of her immense resources of minerals and the power and quality of her people will, with a much smaller population than the United States, nevertheless equal the United States in internal wealth and striking power."

Pay continued: "It follows that Canada cannot allow herself to be attached militarily or diplomatically to England, England, therefore, must gradually work to a position in which she is attached to Canada."

Canada will not welcome the implications of this. She herself would prefer to continue as a middle power, intermediate and mediate, but ultimately her policy must conform to the realities of power, however unwelcome the accommodation may be."

Pay also referred to the "disastrous policy of placating Russia and the United States by surrendering the balance of our overseas Empire."

Syracuse Dairy Starts Something

Sale of bottled milk by the pound by a Syracuse dairy, reported by the Hotelier-Priest News, is said to permit reader comparisons with the costs of other foods at retail and thus to allow the dairy to expand the superior value of milk as a food. No customer was heard to protest the change from liquid to solid form, but many of customers affected is not given. Those devoted to provincial wisdom might regret the inference thus done to an old saying, "A pint's a pound the world around," for two pints of milk make 5 1/2 pounds. There is a precedent for sale of milk by the pound, and a food of choice of milk from farmers is by the pound. But the Syracuse dairy nevertheless remains an island of bold innovation.—New York Sun.

Robbed of Sleep by Rheumatic Pain

But No Pain Now—After a Few Weeks of Krouchen

"I was so miserable at being told of 'such dreadful pain' caused her to write the letter."

"I had to have such dreadful pains in my knees, ankles and shoulders, to say nothing of my back which I felt as though it would break. I had no ease, especially at night, but since taking Krouchen Salts for a few weeks only, I feel a different woman, I feel good now. I have no pain now. I feel much brighter and bolder in every respect, but certainly continue with Krouchen." (Mrs. M. M. M.)

Most rheumatic pain and swelling is caused by too much uric acid in the body. This painful deposit settles in the muscles, joints and tendons, irritates the nerves and inflames the tissues. Krouchen Salts act on these pain-making deposits by helping your system to dispose of them and to pass them out of your body. This relieves the pain and if you are wise, you will continue with the little morning dose of Krouchen as a help against further attacks. Try Krouchen for the relief of Rheumatic pain and swelling. See also "The art of rheumatism" by Dr. Krouchen.

Little Willie (seeing the vicar approaching, and remembering the text he had given her at Sunday school): "Oh, Mummy... Here's the gentleman who gave me that advertisement about Heaven."

"Happiness," said the philosopher, "is the pursuit of something, not the catching of it."

Mr. Clifton then asked: "Have you ever chased the last bus on a rainy night?"

Man Who Invented Toast Not Known

The origins of toast are lost in the mists of antiquity. Some inspired philosopher ought to do for toast what Charles Lamb did for roast pig. We are sure that it is at least a plausible theory of how it came to be most probably the actual inventor will never be known, and it is best so, for measurements would be erected to him at every crossroads, adding intolerably to our traffic problems. Toast is the size just out of every American breakfast—not even coffee would be less readily dispensed with. Every materialist knows that the quickest way to get the men-folk out of bed in the morning is not to tangle a bell but to open the kitchen door and chuck and let the fumes of toast like income pervade the house.—New York Sun.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

MR. PRECISION

By DOUGLAS H. WESTON

ONCE Sam Perwell had loved his wife but now she regarded her with loathing. She had long since lost her handsome beauty and symmetrical figure; her white hair was always untidy and her pathetic features had thickened and coarsened. Once she had had a waist he could almost encircle with one arm; today she tipped the scales at well over two hundred pounds and looked like a flour sack tied in the middle.

On the other hand, Sam, although edging toward sixty, looked no more than forty-five and, what was more to the point, still felt young. His capacity for enjoying life was still large and if Mathilda could not enjoy it with him there were others who could. Particularly Veronica. Unfortunately Mathilda controlled the pure strings, a fact which Sam now found to correct.

It was all very simple. The best murder was in the morning. The morning of it all rather astonished Sam and later, as he sat in his office reviewing the morning's work, he pondered that he hadn't gone about dumping of Mathilda years ago.

As usual he left the apartment at eight o'clock, calling goodbye to Mathilda, who sat at the breakfast table, reading the morning paper. She reminded him, in the hearing of Hilton who lived across the hall, that they were going to her brother that evening for bridge.

The two men chatted inconsequentially as they walked down the stairs and up the street. Hilton, who as insurance, mentioned the epidemic of burglaries in the district of Mathilda, who said that something should be done about it. At the corner, Hilton dashed across the street to catch an approaching streetcar and Sam turned east, nodding to Joe How, the laundryman, who was talking to the corner grocer.

At the next corner Sam turned down the street and slipped along the alley to the apartment service entrance and cautiously made his way into the apartment. He let himself softly into the kitchen. Through the doorway he could see Mathilda in the dining room, fumbling through her purse. She never heard her husband enter and on her knees he knew anything more after he struck her with a length of lead pipe. She crumpled to the floor in a sprawling heap, a little surprised grunt. Sam waited long enough to ascertain she was dead and to extract her wallet from her purse.

He had to take a taxi to get to the office for his usual time of eight thirty, taking the precaution to get out of a block or so from the office. Hilton, the switchboard operator, was talking to the office manager who looked at his watch as Sam entered.

"I can set my watch by you," grinned the manager. "Precisely eighty-three." Sam smiled, shaking the rain from his hat. His insistence on being everything precisely on the dot was something of a joke around the office.

"Did you walk over?" asked Hilton. Sam nodded. "Every day, rain or shine, winter or summer."

"It must be murderous in subzero weather," commented Hilton. Sam said one became accustomed to such inconveniences, but privately he wished Hilton had used some other adjective.

In his office he relaxed. The janitor would find Mathilda when he went up to repair the leaky faucet in the bathroom which he, Perwell, had expressly called him about the previous night. He would call the police and the police—Sam chuckled. He had no fear of the police. Everything was perfect.

The police came seeking Perwell just as he was preparing to go out for lunch. There were two of them, tall, husky young men with pleasant features. One introduced himself as Johnny Beauchamp of the Homicide squad and the other as Evan Doty, father, whose name was vaguely familiar but whom Sam couldn't place.

"Homicide squad?" echoed Sam. "Yes," Beauchamp nodded, his face grave. "Someone entered your apartment this morning and assaulted your wife."

Sam gripped the desk and awaited, hoping the distress on his face was convincing. "How—how is she?" he faltered.

"Dead," said Carter bluntly. It was

OLD ACQUAINTANCE—A Labrador retriever dog, Gyn, arrived in Toronto, Ont., from Aberdeen, Scotland, yesterday with her 20-year-old war bride owner, Mrs. Helen Bodrug, and met the Bodrug son, Ronald, five months old. Mrs. Bodrug, seen here with Ronald and Gyn, came to Toronto from Scotland with her husband, formerly in the R.C.A.F.

as they were on their way to the apartment in the police car that Sam realized that Evan Doty Carter was not with them. "He isn't officially connected with us," explained Beauchamp, although he has worked with us several times. He just happened to be in my office when the call came through."

The police were courteous and efficient. Their efficiency almost puzzled Sam. Mathilda was lying on the studio couch, covered with a plain blanket. Other policemen stood watchfully around. Beauchamp wanted to know if anything was missing and Sam looked through her purse and in bureau drawers.

"I don't know how much money she had,"

he said. "He wanted to know what time she left and he told them, remembering that Hilton across the hall could corroborate his statement. They asked him if he had any ideas and pointed out bitterly that the district of late had had a number of burglaries; only the preceding week a neighbor who had been burglarized some time ago had been pulled into an alley and the rings pulled forcibly from her fingers. Beauchamp nodded and muttered that the force was still understaffed.

After they were through questioning he packed a small bag and went to his brother's to stay for a few days. The police were such simpletons!

Mathilda was buried and the police had apparently dropped the case, after a coroner's jury had returned a verdict of death at the hands of person or persons unknown. Sam returned to the furniture, moved the apartment and moved into his brother's. Everybody was so sympathetic.

Then, one evening, Beauchamp and Evan Doty called. Sam was in the living room reading and he looked up to surprise as they entered. Beauchamp leaned against the bookcase and Carter slumped into a chair facing Sam. Sam felt uneasy. Beauchamp was regarding him curiously and Carter had a peculiar expression of a cat who has caught a mouse.

"Mr. Perwell," said Beauchamp slowly, "what time did you say you left the apartment the day your wife was murdered?"

"Eight o'clock," replied Sam promptly. "I always left at eight o'clock."

"Yeah," drawled Carter, "and you got to the office at precisely eight thirty. You're a very precise man, Mr. Perwell."

"Being precise is no crime, I hope!" he snapped. "No," agreed the detective. "But murder is."

Perwell gasped. "M-murder?" he stammered. Carter nodded. "Yeah. We did it all investigating. Around your office they call you Mr. Precision. They say you do everything precisely on the dot. You get in at precisely eight thirty. At precisely ten you go down stairs for coffee. At precisely twelve you go for lunch, returning at precisely thirty. At precisely five fifteen you go home for the day."

Carter continued. "You slipped back in the house via the service entrance, slugged your wife and took her wallet for a motive. But you didn't go out the way you came. You forgot yourself and walked out the front door. Besides, in including a laundryman and a grocer, saw you pass at your usual time, then to their amazement you passed the second time. But none could recall seeing you return to your apartment."

Meekly Sam told out his visits to Beauchamp preceding handoffs.

"It was too simple," said Carter. "You were so accustomed to traveling precisely the same way every morning that after killing your wife you forgot you had already walked out the front way once, and not promptly walked out the second time."

"And that," said Beauchamp with grim humor, "is precisely where we come in."

During the Asan, Mohammed call to prayer, passers in the street must stand still, all work must cease and even the sick must sit up in bed.

SAUNDERS WHEAT
NEW VARIETY

WINNIPEG.—A new wheat variety known as Saunders, described as highly resistant to stem rust, loose smut and hant or covered smut, has been recommended for licensing by the joint agricultural committee of the National Research Council.

The committee, in session here in the Peace River, Northern Alberta and Northwestern Saskatchewan fields. It was two or three days earlier in ripening than either of the other two varieties, and was also found to be equal to the best wheat in baking qualities.

GARDEN NOTES

Not Too Formal

An informal layout of flower garden, lawn and shrubbery about the home almost always gives the best results. Straight rows, straight paths and everything just so is a matter of taste. The average lot in town or country there are too many lines, any cause, like driveways, foundation walls and fences. The main idea in gardening is to make these and soften them. To do this, shrubbery is planted in irregular clumps around, but not too close to, the house. With shrubs on the corners and around the front porch, variety may be added by the planting of flowers.

Will They Grow in Canada?

Many beautiful flowers and shrubs that will grow well in the Southern States in the mild climate of England will not grow well in Canada. One wastes money, time and work in trying them here. Our climate and other conditions are not suitable, just as their conditions do not suit certain things that thrive abundantly here. To guard against the discouraging effects to produce these tender plants, one is advised to stick to those flowers, shrubs and vegetables that are especially recommended for Canadian conditions. The varieties and types listed in the Canadian seed catalogues. These have all been tested under Canadian conditions and they are only ones recommended by the Canadian authorities.

Grow 'em Fast! Any vegetable taken right out of the garden will grow better in Canada than those that are out of season. As any experienced gardener knows, there is a vast difference between those properly grown and the other kind. The real secret of tender vegetables is quick, unchecked growth. To get the means planting at the proper time, not too early with tender things that need cold weather may check, and then they will be harvested when necessary.

Old gardeners push growth along quickly with plenty of cultivation, fertilizers and water when necessary, and if possible. They also spread manure over at least several weeks so that young stuff is coming along luxuriantly. Another trick they use is to plant several different types, an early-maturing sort, a medium and a late. In the seed catalogue usually will be listed the number of days to maturity. This one can purchase, say, peas that will be ready for the table in fifty days, some in sixty and some in seventy.

Use one of all three there will be a succession of good crops instead of a regular feed followed by a famine. Most experienced gardeners continue making sowings of carrots, beets, beans, lettuce and spinach from the time the ground is first ready up to mid-July.

German Crooner Unable To Get Attention

BERLIN.—Wilhelm Strienz, German crooner who popularized the Nazi song, "Churchill, You Old Lord of Lies," has nowhere to sing.

Although Allied authorities gave him permission to sing again he finds few sponsors who dare provide him an audience.

But this 38-year-old singer, whose intimate vocal rendering of "A Playful Little German Soldier's Wife" and other German songs caused him to be fraudulently to scream realistically, insists he only sang the Churchill song once.

In 1941 Goebbels classified the Churchill songs as "undesirable" because it tends to make the enemy popular with the German people."

Gave Idea For Telephone Booth

An unidentified Boston landlady who complained about the "yelling" of telephone inventor Alexander Graham Bell opened the way to the first telephone booth.

At a luncheon commemorating the 100th anniversary of Bell's birth, Gordon S. Wallace recounted the incident as he heard it years ago from Bell's assistant, Thomas Watson.

"He told me that the landlady of a rooming house where Bell was experimenting threatened to dispossess both of them if they didn't stop that yelling."

"So, in hopes of deadening the sound, Watson stripped his room of bedclothes, draperies and rugs and wrapped himself in them."

"And that's how the telephone booth was born."

Dr. Windsor has returned to his duties at the Blackfoot reserve after an absence of some eight months. While holidaying last summer near Creston B.C., the doctor had the mis-

Next Friday is Good Friday and a public holiday consequently all places of business in town will be closed. Auctioneer B. Wood is holding an auction sale on Saturday, April 13, at Sutermeister Industries. The articles to be auctioned belong to G. H. Gooderman and W. Sutermeister.

Robert T. Williamson, a resident at Riverside House for the past year died last week at the age of 94 years. He was born in Shelburne, Ontario, and for the past 17 years had lived in Alberta following his trade as a cook. He came to Gleichen from Calgary. The funeral took place Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Major A. F. Parkinson of the Salvation Army officiating. A nephew and niece from Lethbridge attended the funeral. A brother survives in Vancouver.

No one can be happy living within himself—to enjoy life to the fullest measure you must share happiness with others.

It is interesting to note that two motion picture companies, Warner Brothers, Inc. of America and Associated British Picture Corp., Ltd., have joined in a new business venture to produce movies in the British Isles. With studios in Ebury, England, the joint company will draw on top British stars, writers and directors. This advent by Warner Brothers into the British field is evidence that this United States company realizes the great progress made recently by Great Britain in the field of motion pictures.

Before the war British movies had little appeal in North America. The dialogue was difficult to understand, the photography was often poor. Recently, however, the industry in Britain has taken a tremendous leap forward producing pictures that are every bit as good as the best Hollywood can turn out. There have been some remarkably talented actors and actresses come to the fore, notably Lawrence Olivier, James Mason, the baroness Kerr, Margaret Lockwood, Ralph Richardson and Rex Harrison.

A feature of the majority of British pictures is their air of authenticity. It is heartening to see Britain take the lead in motion pictures because she has contributed so much in the past to the field of entertainment. And there is another reason, too—every British made film exhibited in America brings back dollars, thus helping Britain on the road to financial recovery.

the Federal Government, bringing the total to $5 a bushel and making flax one of the best potential money producing crops on the prairies.

The price increase would appear to have come just in time to influence every farmer in their decision to spring plantings, and indications are that the flax crop this year will be considerably larger than the one which brought close to $20,000 to prairie farmers in 1946. Last year's flax crop was in the vicinity of 7,500,000 bushels.

At $5 a bushel, flax becomes an attractively priced crop for many farmers who have not included it in their crop rotation in the past. Flax goes into the manufacture of such a wide variety of materials now in short supply that a ready domestic and export market is assured for years to come. Added to that is the fact that sound advice now is available as to methods of eliminating many of the features which once made some farmers decide against flax growing.

A large number of farmers have been growing flax for years now, and invariably the experience of these men has been that, when correctly handled, flax is a most profitable crop year after year. With the price increased by $1.75 a bushel, flax gives every indication of being even more profitable in the future.

There can be little doubt, in view of the price rise, that many farmers will be giving serious consideration to a flax crop this season. To them we can most heartily recommend the new 1947 edition of the booklet "The Truth About Flax" of the National Barley and Linseed Flax Committee at Winnipeg, as a clear and detailed explanation as to best methods of raising flax.

All-in-all, flax looks like an expanding and continuing crop on the prairies. The price is good, it is a cash crop, the market is waiting and sound methods of flax growing learned now can stand many a farmer in good stead in years to come. The uses to which flax products can be put are growing steadily, which indicates that flax will be in heavy demand after the close of the season when other crops have been removed.

Line Elevator Farm Service

Conducted by DR. B. N. SMALLMAN
Office-Charge, Stored Products Insect Laboratory, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

New Insect Laboratory

Dr. K. W. Nesbitt, Director, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, recently announced the establishment of a new Science Service Laboratory at Winnipeg. The new laboratory will investigate the control of insects attacking foodstuffs in storage facilities, processing plants, and during transport. The services of the new laboratory will be available in all those concerned with insect problems on farms, grain elevators, mills, feed plants, and warehouses. Farmers, country elevator owners, and others, are asked to take full advantage of the services offered.

The most important foodstuffs today, when first stages of the war population are facing starvation, are those capable of transportation and storage in large quantities without deterioration. Such are the cereal grains and their products. But insects take a heavy toll of these valuable foodstuffs.

In Canada, of course, damage to stored products by insects is only a fraction of that in countries such as India. Nevertheless, the potential danger is real enough. Despite the advantages of our climate, and modern storage and processing facilities, insects cause important losses annually in Western Canada for all stages of cereal production from the farmer's granary to the consumer's kitchen are subject to infestation.

The function of the new laboratory is to investigate and develop methods for reducing insect infestation in stored foodstuffs to a minimum. New insecticides and insecticidal methods will be tested both in the laboratory and under practical conditions. The development of practical and effective methods of reducing the enormous losses caused by stored product insects is of great economic importance to the food industries of Western Canada.

An increase of $1.75 a bushel in the price of flax has been announced by
